Reversibles will be popular this fall. Reversible coats, jackets, hats, skirts, even fur coats are seen in the leading fall color theme collections. This is good news to the girl on a clothes budget, for here one garment can have two lives.

One fashion reversible was a magnificent tweed coat on one side and a solid wool on the other. Another interesting coat, if not too practical, was made of vicuna and lined with a new mutation mink or vice versa. This bit of beauty was to the tune of nine thousand dollars.

The New York showings emphasize luxury. Fabric, detail and color will go together to make fabulous looking clothes for the fall and winter. Cut and line have never been more important.

Day-time clothes are neat and well-composed but always with a touch of the new season coming through. It is reflected in the day dress of tweed with black satin piping, and the fine sheer wools, cut like a dream, with a minimum of trimming.

The tunic coat suit is now in appearance. Collars on coats and suits move away from the face. A horseshoe collar gives a new detail to the sport coat. Some double-breasted coats button all the way to the hem.

The fuller coat with ample lines is still in style. Hooded coats are back in fashion, and are seen on evening coats and sport coats, as well.

HEALTH OFFICER STRESSES PHYSICAL READINESS FOR OPENING OF SCHOOL

Is your child really ready for school? Soon many parents of preschool children will be asking themselves this question.

State Health Commissioner, Dr. Mack I. Shanholtz, interested particularly in every child's physical readiness for school, notes that "all children should begin the venture in the best possible physical condition."

He reminds parents that "preschool children planning to enter Virginia schools in September should be taken to their physicians or to the nearest preschool clinic for a complete physical check-up. Prompt action is necessary in order that any medical treatments or corrections recommended by the physicians can be taken care of before the opening of school."

The state law requires that all children present evidence of a successful vaccination against smallpox before enrolling in Virginia schools. It is strongly recommended also that parents have their children immunized against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, and poliomyelitis.

Dr. Shanholtz noted that a thorough medical examination should include checking for vision, hearing, heart, posture, and weight. A dental examination should also be given. He emphasized that any defects should be corrected now.

Quoting fom the buletin "Getting Them Ready for School," a joint publication of the State Department of Health and the State Department of Education, Dr. Shanholtz said, "Delaying these corrections not only means the child will probably miss many days from school due to illness, but also that his health and well-being may be endangered. You owe it to your child to give him a clean bill of health."

CHIGGER CONTROL

If you decide to do battle with the chiggers, use dimethyl phtalate, or benzyl benzoate on your clothing. These chemicals are sold under various trade names.

Another good idea for the hiker in infested territory is to use dusting sulphur in shoes, pants cuffs, and sleeve cuffs.

Yards or picnic areas can be treated with one gallon of toxaphene or chlordane, liquid concentrate, in 50 gallons of water, or with lindane at the rate of two pounds of wetable powder in 50 gallons of water. Under normal conditions, the treatment should be effective from three to six weeks.

One way to find out if there are chiggers around is to place a dark-colored paper edgewise on the grass. If chiggers are present they will crawl up the paper and congregate on the top edge. Young chiggers which are the troublemakers, are straw-colored and can be seen against a dark background.

Hancock Firm Low Bidder For 3 Local School Projects

Arrangements made yesterday at the August meeting of the County Board of Supervisors for the necessary funds, will enable the County School Board to proceed at once on a sizeable building program.

The firm of C. W. Hancock & Sons, Lynchburg, was low bidder on the school projects, which call for moving the A. H. S. Home Economics Department in a wing of the high school building from the cottage hithertoo used, for a school bus garage, and for a new Agriculture Building at the Carver-Price High School. The low bid on the three projects was $96,948.86. However, this was $14,448.86 over the sums originally made available for the projects, so the matter was presented to the Supervisors yesterday. The Board did a pruning job on the projects, eliminating some items deemed not immediately essential, and cut $11,160.00 from the total, and then approved providing the difference of $3,288 so the contract could be let. Eliminated were a storage room for the Agriculture Building, a driveway, and fence, and use of a different type roof, etc.

It is understood that work on the Home Economics quarters will be hastened, as this job will have to be in process while school is in session in the main A. H. S. building. The other two projects are "on campus" location. It will take from three to five months to complete all of the work.

J. A. Burke, Division Superintendent, and T. DeWitt Evans, Chairman of the School Board, appeared before the Supervisors to work out the final financing arrangements. A major portion of the funds will come from state sources.

Paid Visitors At McLean House Set A Record Last Sunday

There were more paid admissions at the McLean House last Sunday than on any other day since the famous Surrender House has been restored and open to the public, it was reported today at the local National Park Service Office. A total of over 500 visitors entered the house Sunday, of which number 351 were paid admissions. Children and students are admitted free.

Also, the report stated that for the month of July, there were over 5,000 paid admissions at the McLean, a total of 7,200 admissions including children and student groups, for another record.

The Park Service office said that it was a "conservative estimate" that over 16,000 visitors were at the Old Appomattox Court House area during July. This was about 6,000 more than in the same month of 1956.

A continued interest in historic Appomattox, plus the influx of out-of-state visitors touring Virginia in connection with the Jamestown Festival Year were given as reasons for the increases in attendance at Appomattox Court House.

DEATH TOLL

Chicago.- The sinking of the Titantic, the Chicago fire, and the San Francisco earthquake were headline-getters of yesteryear — and they won't soon be forgotten.

But the combined death toll from those and 49 other major disasters since 1865 is only 28,094 — far short of the 40,000 persons killed in motor vehicle accidents in 1956, according to "Accident Facts," statistical yearbook of the National Safety Council.

Total loot in the series amounted to over $600. Biggest loss was at the J. E. Sears Co., Inc., where a tall safe was ripped open. A vial of tear gas was broken when tthe safe door was opened, but this did not stop the taking of over $600.

Also entered were the Appomattox Frozen Food Locker and the Simpson Food Market, where there were minor losses.

Farm Woodlands Can Supplement Income Cut By Drought

Many farmers faced with reduced income as a result of the drought can turn to their woodlands for rescue, says Carl Holcomb, forester for the VPI Agricultural Extension Service, but with caution.

He says any farmer who plans to sell some of his timber to supplement his income this summer and fall should learn one important lesson: the woods acreage on the farm is an important crop and a source of revenue which can wait to be harvested in times of emergency. Holcomb says to cut only those trees which are ready to be harvested, or which should be taken out in thinning. To liquidate the timber crop would be very unwise. There may be another emergency next year, or the year after.

The forester has these suggestions for the farmer who plans to sell some timber this year:

If timber is to be sold on the stump, have it marked for cutting before it is sold. This service is provided at a small charge by the Virginia Division of Forestry.

Cut timber according to good forest practices. For pine timber, the thinning should not be too heavy. With drought conditions in the pine areas of the state, too heavy a cutting invites insect troubles. Logging slash should be lopped to the ground and should not come in contact with standing pine trees.

Consider the added income to be gained from cutting your own timber. With pulpwood, this can mean an income four times as much as if the trees were sold for someone else to cut.

Have a market or a sale for the timber before cutting is begun. Otherwise, it may have to be sold at a reduced price, if at all.

Take precautions against fire damage during and after cutting.

Holcolm says another source of supplementary income is cost-share payments by the government for forest establishment and improved practices under the Agricultural Conservation Program. There are still funds available in many counties for conservation practice payments. Since much of the payment is for labor used for such practices, the landowner can create a job for himself on his farm.

Interested farmers would do well to obtain a management plan for their woodlands before making ap-

The Norfolk and Western Railway today petitioned the Virginia State Corporation Commission for authority to discontinue three passenger runs which have amassed a combined operating loss of over $460,000 in the last twelve months.

The trains are Number 7, Petersburg to Roanoke local; Number 8, Roanoke to Norfolk local, and Number 27 which runs from Norfolk to Petersburg. The road proposed additional stops by other trains to handle local passengers and express. It declared that during the last two months Train 7 had averaged only five passengers a day, while Trains 8 and 27 had averaged eight each.

Train 7 leaves Petersburg at 11:35 A. M. and arrives in Roanoke at 5:30 P. M., while Train 8 leaves Roanoke at 11:45 A. M. and reaches Norfolk at 7:05 P. M. It is proposed that Trains 18 and 45 be given flag stops to handle local passengers between Roanoke and Lynchburg and that Trains 3 and 4 make flag stops for local passengers between Lynchburg and Petersburg. East of Lynchburg local passengers and express would be handled by Trains 21 and 22. West of Petersburg Train 15 and 16 would handle express to stations served by them. The Railway Express Agency will establish highway service to other stations not now having express service. Trains 7 and 8 do not carry U. S. mail.

Train 27 leaves Norfolk at 10:-15 P. M. and carries the Norfolk-Roanoke sleeper and the Norfolk-Portsmouth, Ohio coach which it delivers to Train 15 at Petersburg. These cars would be handled on Train 21 leaving Norfolk at 8 P. M. It would also carry mail and express cars now moving on Train 27.

Seek Drought Aid In County

Appomattox County yesterday joined the growing list of Virginia counties seeking designation as drought disaster areas. The Board of Supervisors adopted a resolution addressed to Gov. Stanley, asking for such designation, which, if granted would make possible some Federal aid in securing feed for livestock.

The extended drought has caused the virtual loss of the corn crop in many sections, especially in counties east of here. Large parts of Appomattox County have been hard hit by the extended dry weather.
